Armed with a repeating Winchester, and supplied with over 100 rounds of ammunition, and with the expressed determination in his heart not to be taken alive, Justin Head, an Apache-Mohave Indian, who late yesterday afternoon killed another Indian wood, in a drunken brawl, and, upon fleeing to another Indian camp, near Camp Verde, where he demanded protection from the band of '100 enraged Indians who were pursuing him, shot and killed three other bucks and one squaw, because the Indians attempted his capture, is now fleeing towards the Fort Apache reservation, with some 200 Indians hot upon his trail, vowing vengeance for the five murders if the murderer is caught.

The Apache, Head, is about 30 years of age, described as being six feet tall, rather thin, and of mean visage. He was educated at Carlisle, and up to the time of killing his first victim, near Cottonwood, was not considered of a desperate nature, although it is now asserted by some of his former companions, that he has always desired to emulate that notorious bandit of former days, the Apache Kid, who, it is said, was a distant relative of Head's.

Yest rday Head imbibed freely from a large bottle of whisky he had obtained from some unknown source, and becoming engaged in an altereation with a young Indian on a ranch near Cottonwood, whose name could not be learned, shot him to death with a Winin an altercation with a young Indian on a ranch near Cottonwood, whose name could not be learned, shot him to death with a Windiester.

He immediately fled, going in the direction of another Indian camp near Camp Verde. Arriving there, he demanded protection from his pursuers, who numbered over 100. This was refused, and an attempt made, on the contrary, to effect his capture.

Head immediately opened fire with his Winchester crowd of Indians, and as a result of his excellent aim, three bucks and a squaw fell dead before he ceased firing.

Head then started on a dog-trot toward Fort Apache, with some 200 Indians pursuing him, but up to a late hour last night had not been caught. He is a dead shot and it is known that he will not be taken alive, so that the chances are good for him adding a number of other victims to his list before his career of bloodshed is finally ended by a bullet,
